Laura Golden Liff is an experienced litigator who represents companies and business owners in complex commercial and government contracts litigation at the trial and appellate levels.

Though she has handled cases from coast to coast, the majority of Laura's practice is concentrated in Northern Virginia, particularly in the Eastern District of Virginia's "Rocket Docket" and Fairfax County Circuit Court. Clients ranging from Fortune 500 companies to startups have trusted Laura to represent them due to her experience litigating cases in these fast-track jurisdictions.

Due to her proximity to the nation's capital, a significant portion of Laura's practice involves representing government contractors in disputes between teaming agreement partners, joint venture partners, prime contractors and subcontractors as well as claims under the False Claims Act. Laura also specializes in representing companies in business tort litigation, corporate governance matters and shareholder disputes as well as litigation involving the protection of intellectual property and trade secrets and enforcement of restrictive covenants.

Laura is methodical, a zealous advocate and has an excellent track record of obtaining results. She tailors the strategy of each case to the specific needs and business objectives of her clients. They rely upon her sound business judgment, sharp legal acumen and old-fashioned common sense to tackle their legal challenges. Laura is dedicated, hardworking and committed to serving her clients, both inside and outside of the courtroom.
